Sandrine Ahouassou has been working with a diverse clientele of children, women and families from expatriate and immigrant backgrounds since 2003. She holds a Bachelor's degree in Communication from Université de Marne la Vallée in Paris and a Master's degree in Management from Université du Québec à Rimouski, and is a Chartered Professional in Human Resources (CPHR). Her many professional and personal aspirations have led her to work with different people and cultures in Africa, Europe and Latin America.

She joined the Conseil des écoles catholiques du Centre-Est (CECCE) in 2017 as an international education manager, where she is responsible for business development, partnerships and international mobility strategies. She accompanies the CECCE schools in welcoming and integrating students from kindergarten to grade 12 and their immigrant families. She constantly strives to create an inclusive and caring francophone environment for her students.

Given her lifelong interest in social and collective causes, Sandrine has been involved in various initiatives over the years. She namely sat on the board of directors of Service Intégration Travail Outaouais (SITO) from 2016 to 2018, where she played a significant role in the integration of immigrants.
